2005

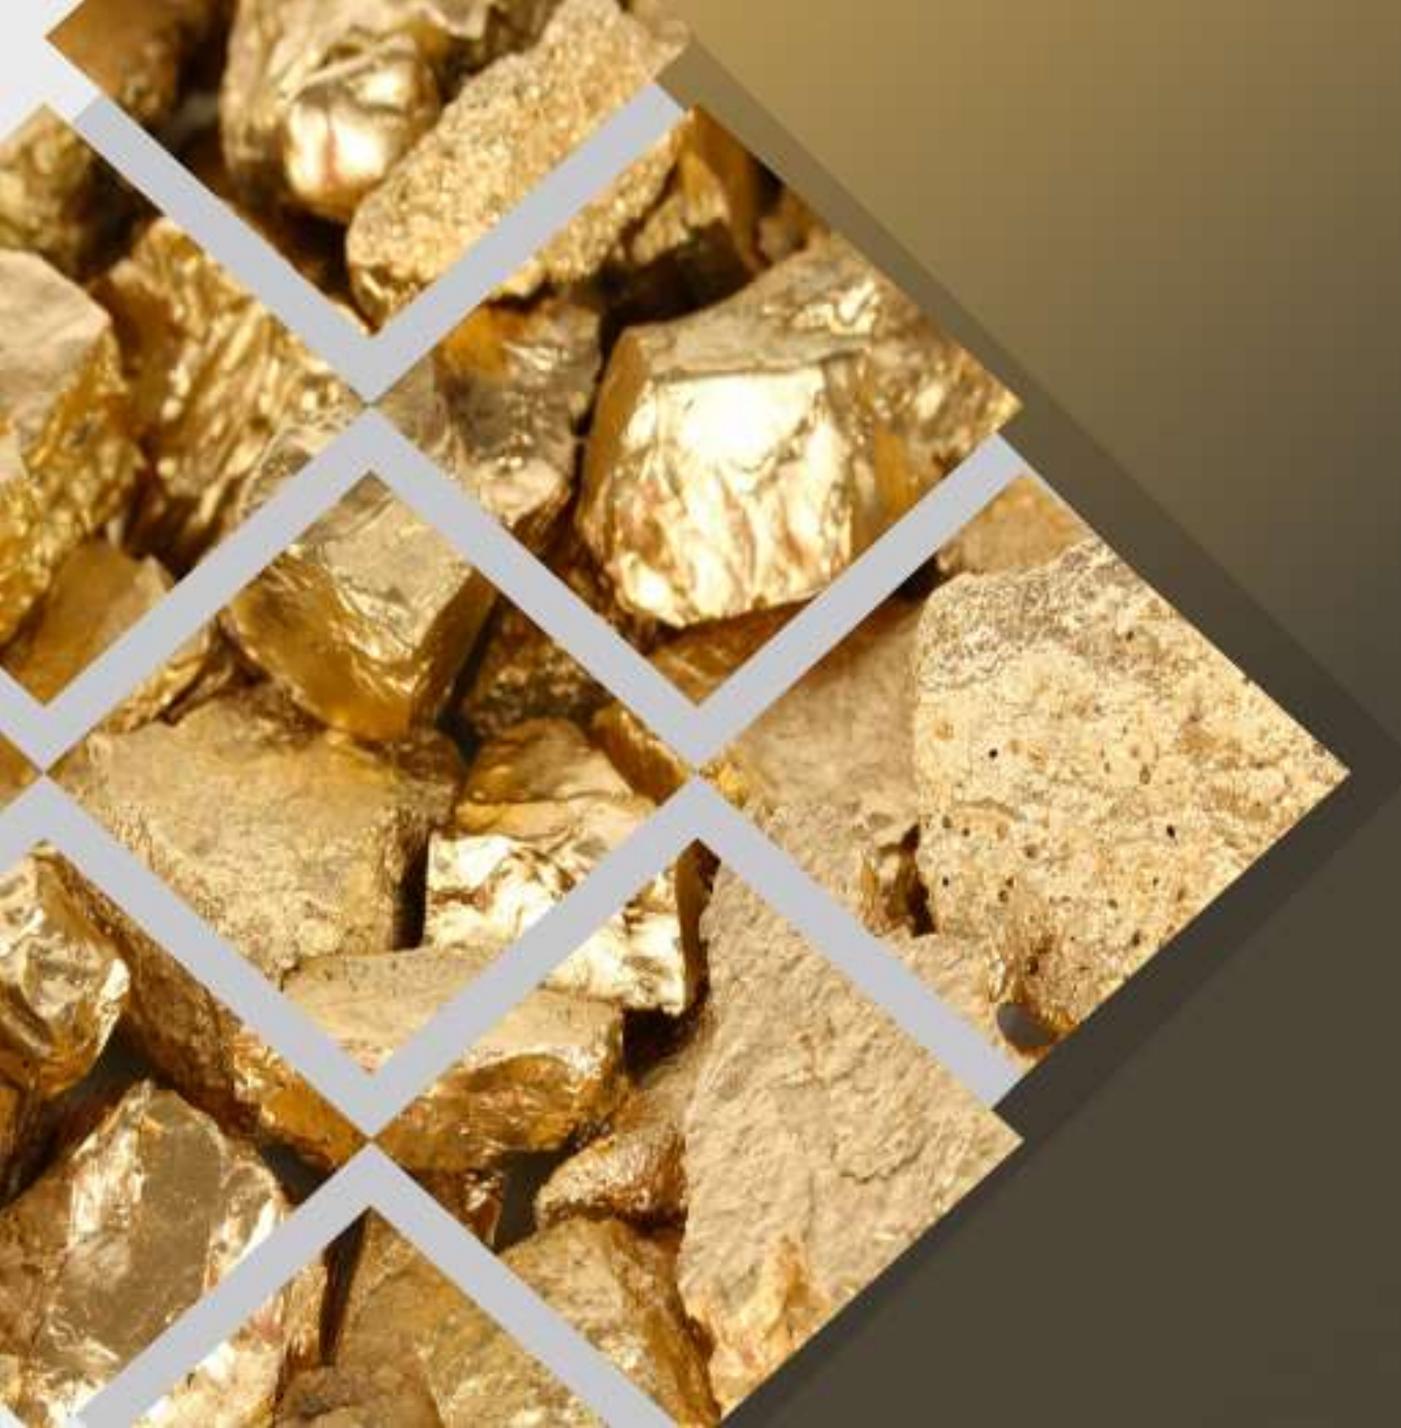

That year marked a number of critical milestones in the company's history. First, the name was changed to Brightrock Gold Corporation. Alluvial and hard rock sites were developed at Ashanti Gold Belt. West African Projects Consult LTD was acquired. The sites within Jukwa and Grumesa played a big part in making Brightrock Gold one of the top hard rock miners in 2013.

2013

Specifically, it markedly improved safety records, installed renewables-based generating capacities in the areas remote from the electric grid, worked out and launched the policy as regards human rights and climate change in line with the best global practices.

2017

The corporation agreed and set about implementing its hybrid plan in relation to prospecting, exploration and production. It immediately launched placer mining while carrying out testing and assessment of hard rock, a more intensive activity in terms of labor input.
